ポイント

「原因と結果を表す」ときは、以下の表現を使います。

● as a result (結果として)

Playing smartphone games affects our studies. As a result, it's difficult to study for our exams and our grades drop. (スマートフォンのゲームで遊ぶことは私たちの学業に影響します。 その結果、試験勉強するのが難しくなり、成績が下がります。)

● so (それで、だから)

If there's an emergency on our way home or to school, we can immediately contact our parents.

So, there is no harm in bringing smartphones to school, because they can be useful.

(もし登下校中に緊急事態が起こったら、私たちはすぐに両親に連絡することができます。

だから、スマートフォンは役に立つので、学校に持っていくことに害がないのです。)

● that is why (それで、だから)

I don't want my smartphone to be taken away. That is why I only check it at lunch. (私は自分のスマートフォンを先生に取り上げられたくありません。だから、昼休みにしかスマートフォンを見ません。)

Example

Hello.

I think high school students should bring smartphones to school.

- 1 Smartphones can entertain students during their lunch break. Students can watch videos or look for information online.
- Also, students can use smartphones to get help during emergencies. If they are in trouble while going to and from school, they could call their parents or the police. Overall, smartphones are useful. That is why it's good for students to bring them to school.

Thank you.

Hello.

I don't think high school students should bring smartphones to school.

- 1 First, smartphones don't help in building friendships. Students should talk to each other instead of looking at their phone screens.
- 2 Second, bringing smartphones to school is not good for their studies. They will spend more time using smartphones instead of focusing on their lessons. Smartphones are not helpful for students. That is why they shouldn't bring them to school.

Thank you.
